

Independent Living & Assistive Technology

Independent living (IL) services assist individuals with significant disabilities in living and functioning more independently in their own communities. In Rhode Island IL services are offered by a state agency, Services for the Blind and Visually Impaired (SBVI), and two Independent Living (IL) Centers -- the Ocean State Center for Independent Living (OSCIL) and the PARI Independent Living Center (PARI).

OSCIL and PARI are consumer-controlled, community-based, cross disability, private non-profit organizations. They offer services to individuals or groups of individuals with significant disabilities.

SBVI is a unit within the Rhode Island Office of Rehabilitation Services, Department of Human Services. SBVI offers services to individuals age 55 and older who have severe visual impairments.

To obtain Assistive Technology (AT) from an IL provider, you will need to apply for services at one of the IL Centers or at SBVI. Once you are eligible, you will be assigned an IL Counselor/Specialist at PARI or OSCIL. At SBVI you will be assigned a Social Worker. If you think an AT service or device will help you be more independent, you may ask the provider for an AT assessment, and that provider may also help you to develop an independent living plan that describes the AT services and devices you need.

The IL provider may help pay for the AT device or service you need. Your income will be used to determine whether you need to pay a share of the costs of the AT. PARI, OSCIL and SBVI use the same income guidelines to determine your share of the cost of AT. Some AT services are available at no cost.

The kinds of AT available through the IL providers vary from simple to complex devices. For example:

SBVI provides adaptive equipment related to vision needs.

PARI offers a reuse program of medical equipment and other AT devices; and OSCIL provides assistance in obtaining low-tech devices for elders and individuals with sensory impairments.

If you are denied AT services or devices by SBVI, PARI or OSCIL, you may appeal the denial.
